Ed Pawson led on the Collective Worship (Working Party Update) item – Members were advised that the collective worship guidance was out of date and had since been revised. The phrase ‘time to breathe’ was used as it was considered there was more of an emphasis on reflective practice other than religion. It was hoped that this could be disseminated to Plymouth schools to encourage collective worship and highlight that they need not follow archaic Christian practice.

The following was discussed:

- if the document could be headed with the Plymouth City Council logo and be disseminated to Plymouth schools;
- the terminology in the document, specifically the word ‘assembly’, as this was considered to not help with engagement;
- the importance of an inclusive approach as legally, school were required to do collective worship;
- the importance of sending the document to Plymouth schools in preparation for September when children were expected to return; some schools may not have considered how to offer collective worship in light of changes brought about by Covid 19. There were concerns that collective worship may not be offered because some schools would be unable to offer assemblies;
- Liz was going to live stream her collective worship sessions from her school – this could be a way forward for other schools;
- the possibility of adding a statement from SACRE at the beginning of the document highlighted the legal duty of collective worship
